ICOLD ahead to the progress of dams and reservoirs engineering to address the world's challenges

ICOLD has set an ambitious 2013 agenda. President Carlos Ruiz has outlined the organization's strategy for the coming year. The organization's focus is on the world's challenges, particularly in the areas of climate change, water security, and sustainable development. ICOLD is committed to providing technical assistance and training to its members, and to promoting the development of high-quality dams and reservoirs that meet the needs of the world's population.

The organization's 2013 agenda includes several key initiatives:

- Technical Assistance: ICOLD will continue to provide technical assistance to its members, particularly in the areas of dam safety, water resources management, and environmental impact assessment.
- Training and Capacity Building: ICOLD will continue to provide training and capacity building opportunities for its members, particularly in the areas of dam safety, water resources management, and environmental impact assessment.
- Research and Innovation: ICOLD will continue to support research and innovation in the areas of dam safety, water resources management, and environmental impact assessment.
- Policy and Advocacy: ICOLD will continue to support policy and advocacy efforts in the areas of dam safety, water resources management, and environmental impact assessment.

ICOLD is committed to providing technical assistance and training to its members, and to promoting the development of high-quality dams and reservoirs that meet the needs of the world's population.
